K'GARI, AUSTRALIA

K'GARI - MEANING PARADISE IN THE NATIVE ABORIGINAL LANGUAGE

K'Gari (formerly Fraser Island) is a World Heritage site listed for the diversity and beauty it holds. Despite being a sand island, Fraser has over 100 lakes and the landscape changes constantly as dunes are moved across the island by wind. With over 350 bird species recorded, K'Gari is also part of an 'Important Bird Area' and on the 'Australian National Heritage' list.

The island can be explored by 4WD coach and kayak. In addition to the natural history, there is a rich Butchulla Aboriginal culture here. The island's most spectacular lake, Lake McKenzie is well suited for a cooling swim and at the historic central station in the heart of the island, it is possible to walk along the banks of the Wanggoolba Creek and become immersed in the peacefulness of the rainforest.

SIGHTS

- Champagne Pools
- Lake Wabby
- Waddy Point
- Eli Creek
- Seventy-Five Mile Beach
- South Ngkala Rocks

LAKE MCKENZIE (BOORANGOORA)

Lake McKenzie (Boorangoora) is a perched lake on K'Gari or Fraser Island in the Great Sandy National Park. The awe-inspiring beauty of Lake McKenzie makes it probably the most visited natural site on the island.

It's a 'perched' lake, which means it contains only rainwater, no groundwater, and it is not fed by streams nor does it flow to the ocean. Lake McKenzie's incredibly pure waters are ideal for swimming and the soft, white sand makes it an incredibly peaceful experience - and works wonders on the skin.

The lake offers great hikers camping facilities, toilets and cold showers.
