VANCOUVER, CANADA

FAMOUS FOR BEING ONE OF THE BEST PLACES IN THE WORLD TO LIVE

Although the area has been inhabited by the Squamish, Musqueam and Tseil-Waututh First Nations for more than 10,000 years, Vancouver is a young city. Its historic heart lies in the trendy Gastown district and its starting point is today marked by the Gastown Steam Clock. It was here that a steambot captain from Yorkshire, Jack Deighton, decided to open the very first saloon in what was still just a group of shacks around the Hastings Mill, which had opened in 1865.

The success of the place attracted people and the town grew up around the bar. The owner's voluble personality soon earned him the name Jack 'Gassy' Deighton. It didn't take long for the little settlement to be named "Gassy's Town" and then, as time went by, Gastown. In 1870, the colonial government made the town official but substituted the name Granville in honour of the Secretary of State of the Colonies at the time, the British Lord Granville. It wasn't until 1886 that the city took on its current name of Vancouver with the arrival of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which expanded the city to include Gastown. Vancouver soon reached its first thousand inhabitants.

But 1886 was also marked by the "Great Fire", which destroyed almost the entire city in no time. The purpose of the man-made fire was to clear a parcel of land for the construction of a railway depot for the Canadian Pacific Railway. But all did not go as planned and the fire, which got out of control, destroyed between 600 and 1000 buildings.

The town was soon rebuilt and prospered rapidly, thanks to its port, railway and geographical location, growing from 1,000 inhabitants to 20,000 in 1900 and 100,000 in 1911. Today, it is the largest city in the region, with a population expected to reach 700,000 by 2021.

As for the historic district of Gastown, which was in ruins and almost destroyed at the end of the 60s, its importance has been recognised, its historic buildings renovated and it was designated a National Historic Site of Canada in 2009. Today, Gastown is a lively and very touristy district.

HAND WASHING & HAND SANITIZING

Keeping hands clean through improved hand hygiene is one of the most important steps we can take to avoid getting sick and spreading germs to others. Many diseases and conditions are spread by not washing hands with soap and clean, running water. Alcohol-based hand sanitizers can quickly reduce the number of germs on hands.
